Newsletters – Titles, Stages, References, Stategies, Subject Lines & More

Newsletter 1: Promotional Mail (Welcome Email)

Audience: New subscribers

Buyer Journey Stage: Late MOFU → Early BOFU (consideration to decision)

Goal: Introduce the brand, build trust, and drive first-time conversion through a welcome offer

Segmentation Strategy: Targeted at individuals who recently opted in via Etsy, Instagram, or the brand website

Reasoning: New subscribers have demonstrated initial interest but may still require brand grounding and reassurance. Combining a concise brand introduction with a time-limited welcome incentive helps reduce hesitation and encourages first-time purchase.

Newsletter 2: Informational Mailer

Audience: Existing subscribers (both buyers and non-buyers)

Buyer Journey Stage: MOFU (consideration / education)

Goal: Educate subscribers, reduce uncertainty, and build brand authority through practical guidance

Segmentation Strategy: Sent to subscribers who have already engaged with the brand but may need additional reassurance or knowledge before purchasing or repurchasing

Reasoning: At the consideration stage, subscribers are more likely to engage with value-driven content rather than direct sales messaging. Focusing on a single educational topic (waist jewelry care) positions the brand as helpful and trustworthy while reducing friction around product usage and longevity.

Subject Line:

Buyer Journey Stage: Late MOFU → BOFU (re-engagement and decision)

Goal: Re-engage subscribers emotionally through seasonal storytelling while driving conversion with a limited-time New Year offer

Segmentation Strategy: Targeted at subscribers already familiar with the brand, leveraging seasonal relevance and community participation

Reasoning: Seasonal emails work best when they combine emotional connection with timely incentives. By centering the message around New Year rituals and intention-setting, the email strengthens brand affinity, while scarcity-based offers encourage immediate action.
