Product Layers Overview

Product layers clarify how OneOhOne Jewelry creates value that goes beyond the physical waist beads & Bracelets.

Each layer contributes differently to how customers perceive meaning, quality, and emotional connection — which is essential for a culturally rooted, storytelling-driven brand.

Core Product

The Emotional & Cultural Need We Solve

What customers truly seek

- A sense of cultural grounding and identity (especially for African and diaspora audiences).
- Jewelry that holds meaning beyond aesthetics.
- A way to express femininity, confidence, and personal storytelling.
- A product aligned with ethical and intentional consumption.

Why this matters for the strategy

The core product shapes our positioning: OneOhOne is not “just jewelry” but a cultural and emotional brand. This informs our brand essence (“Intentional elegance rooted in culture”) and guides which consumers we target in our personas.

Actual Product

The Handcrafted Waist Jewelry & Bracelets Itself

What we physically deliver

- Handcrafted waist beads assembled in The Gambia by artisans.
- High-quality beads; durable threading; secure knotting; clean finishing.
- Distinct aesthetic: modern minimalism blended with West African tradition.
- Named pieces and themed collections (e.g., Moonlight, Mama Africa).
- Limited drops and small-batch production.

Why this matters for the strategy

The actual product establishes our competitive advantage: ethical craftsmanship + curated design. It also informs our competitive landscape — we operate in the small-batch, artisanal, cultural jewelry market, not fast fashion.

Augmented Product

Added Value That Enhances the Experience

What elevates the offering

- Fair-pay, transparent collaboration with Gambian artisans.
- Personalised customer support (DM sizing guidance, care tips, custom orders).
- Care instruction cards included with each purchase.
- Consistent brand storytelling across Etsy, Instagram, TikTok, and pop-ups.
- Custom lengths and future personalised name-based collections (“Named After You”).
- In-person try-ons at markets.

Why this matters for the strategy

The augmented layer strengthens brand loyalty and long-term growth.
These elements directly influence the marketing goals, CRM efforts, and the content plan for newsletters (education, storytelling, transparency, and ethical values).

Business Vision & Marketing Goals

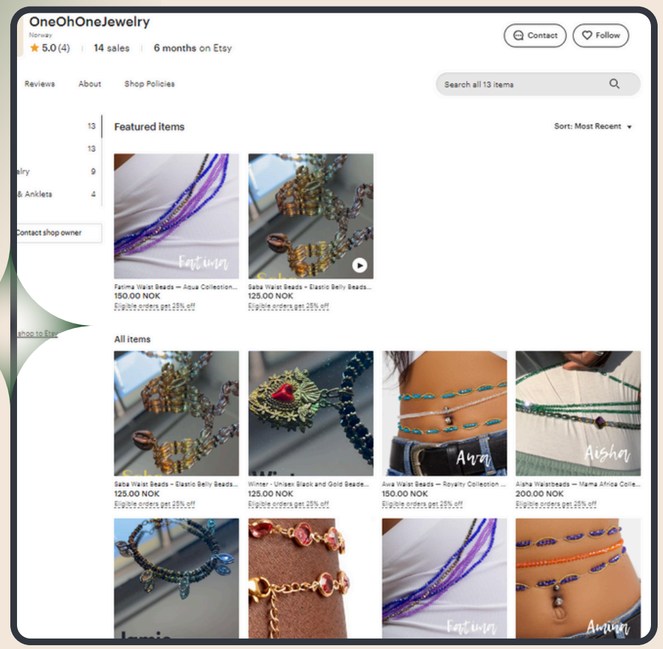

Business Vision

To become a globally recognised waist-jewelry brand rooted in cultural authenticity, emotional storytelling, and ethical craftsmanship — expanding into accessories and curated seasonal collections while supporting artisans in The Gambia.

Long-Term Marketing Vision

To position OneOhOne Jewelry as the leading cultural waist jewelry & accessories brand for African and diaspora women seeking intentional, elegant, and meaningful adornment.

SMART Marketing Goals, (12–18 months)

Goals

- Increase monthly Etsy revenue by 30% within 6 months.
- Grow Instagram from 148 Followers → 250 and TikTok from 108 Followers → 200 within 12 months.
- Achieve 25% of revenue from repeat customers by end of year.
- Build an email list of 50+ subscribers to support long-term CRM and storytelling.
- Reach five+ pop-up markets in Oslo and surrounding cities to boost in-person brand exposure.

Why This Matters

These goals ensure the brand grows sustainably, maintains cultural integrity, and builds a loyal community.

Marketing Initiatives

Strategic initiatives translate the marketing vision into action. They represent the long-term, high-impact efforts that guide campaigns and operational decisions.

STORY-DRIVEN CONTENT ECOSYSTEM

- Expand “Named After You” series across Reels, TikTok, and Etsy.
- Use names, meanings, colour symbolism, and cultural references to drive engagement.

ETHICAL BRAND TRANSPARENCY

- Share occasional behind-the-scenes visuals from The Gambia when possible (photos/videos sent by artisans).
- Provide transparent information about fair pay, production processes, and cultural origins.

COMMUNITY & CRM DEVELOPMENT

- Build structured email list with monthly newsletters (promotional, informational, seasonal).
- Introduce customer photo incentives and UGC (user-generated content).

Marketing Initiatives

Strategic initiatives translate the marketing vision into action. They represent the long-term, high-impact efforts that guide campaigns and operational decisions.

POP-UPS & IN-PERSON EXPERIENCES

- Attend curated markets in Oslo with try-on opportunities.
- Offer exclusive in-person pieces.

PRODUCT DIVERSIFICATION

- Introduce unisex pieces
- New body / hair accessories, and limited seasonal collections.

DATA-DRIVEN OPTIMIZATION

- Use analytics (Etsy, IG Insights, TikTok Analytics) to refine designs, content, and targeting.
- Re-allocate posting times and content themes monthly based on performance.

Positioning Statement

Formal Positioning Statement

For individuals who value culture, elegance, and intentional self-expression, OneOhOne Jewelry offers handcrafted waist jewelry rooted in West African tradition and reimagined through modern minimalism. Unlike mass-produced accessories, OneOhOne pieces are ethically assembled in The Gambia, designed with storytelling at their core, and crafted to honour identity, emotion, and personal connection.

Why This Positioning Works

- Differentiates from fast fashion.
- Anchors the brand in culture + ethics + storytelling.
- Provides a clear direction for marketing communications.

Simplified Positioning

Cultural craftsmanship meets modern elegance.

Brand Essence

Intentional elegance rooted in culture.

Expanded Essence

A brand shaped by identity, emotional storytelling, and culturally grounded design — created to empower self-expression with honesty and soul.

How Essence Guides Marketing

- Tone of voice: warm, articulate, intentional.
- Visual identity: minimalism + warm neutrals + cultural references.
- Messaging: meaning before product, story before sale.

Competitive Landscape

OneOhOne Jewelry operates within a niche but growing segment: artisanal waist jewelry rooted in culture.

Direct Competitors

Small Etsy waist bead makers (handcrafted, cultural designs).

African diaspora jewelry brands.

Indirect Competitors

Fast-fashion waist jewelry (Shein, ASOS, Amazon).

Non-cultural body jewelry brands.

OneOhOne's Competitive Advantages

Real Gambian artisan collaboration.

Storytelling through names, culture, and minimalism.

Limited small-batch drops (scarcity as a brand strength).

Founder-led authenticity and cultural expertise.

Emotional value beyond aesthetics.

Market Challenges

International shipping complexity.

US tariff unpredictability.

Copycat Etsy sellers.

Small production capacity.

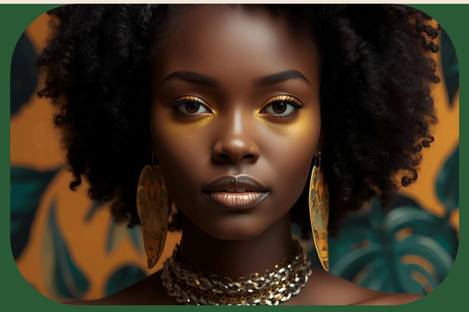

Market Challenges

Growing interest in African artistry.

Increased demand for intentional, slow-made products.

Social media favouring storytelling over mass production .

Our Ethics Clause

OneOhOne Jewelry is committed to ethical, transparent, and culturally respectful marketing practices. The brand does not engage in misleading promotions, hidden fees, or manipulative scarcity tactics. Customer data is collected and used in full compliance with GDPR (General Data Protection Regulation), ensuring privacy, consent, and secure handling of information.

All claims regarding craftsmanship, origin, and production are truthful and verifiable. Storytelling is grounded in real cultural context and does not exploit heritage. Partnerships with artisans in The Gambia follow fair-pay principles, reflecting the brand's belief that ethical integrity is a foundational part of marketing.

This clause guides all communication, content creation, and customer interactions, forming the ethical backbone of OneOhOne Jewelry's marketing operations.
